Understanding the Risks of Modern Slavery

The key direct risks of Modern Slavery to Camargue Group are:

- No contracts of employment including zero hours contracts.
- Under pay of employees, self-employed contractors and subcontract companies – not paying as a minimum the living wage, and not paying an appropriate market rate for services engaged.
- Excessive working hours – the majority of our direct employees have signed Working Time Opt Out Agreements. It is noted that this can lead in some organisations to excessive working hours, defined as, in line with NHS policy as greater than 56 hours per week, or not providing suitable rest periods between shifts or as a minimum a day off per fortnight.
- Not been entitled to work in the country of employment.

We shall ensure that:

- Individuals have the right to work in the country of employment.
- as a minimum a Living Wage is paid.
- that pay reflects current market values for the sector and role.
- that working hours restrictions are complied with, and excessive working hours discouraged.
- that bullying, discrimination and harassment is not permitted or tolerated in any form.
- that site conditions are safe and provide a working environment conducive to the protection of the environment, human health and quality workmanship.

In regards to our supply chain our company is a medium company and thus our ability to influence the supply chain is limited. We do not sub-contract work. We will however implement due diligence in our supply chain in relation to modern slavery:

- We will issue supplier questionnaires to all our key suppliers to enable us to undertake compliance checks to our requirements and to legal requirements regards modern slavery.
- Our contractual requirements require adherence to the Modern Slavery Act 2015.
- We expect our customers to deliver the same ethical treatment of us as a supplier, particularly in regards to payment terms and conditions, rates of pay and timely payment of applications.
